

Kanan Alhassani

Kanan Alhassani is an associate of Provil & Associates and President of Integrated Management Associates. Mr. Alhassani is a project management, international industry expert and an executive management consultant providing national and international program management consulting, education and training services to a variety of industries. His work enables customers to achieve organizational effectiveness in integrating proven project management methodologies with an organization's strategic product / system development life cycle processes to achieve an accelerated time to market for products and services.

Kanan has over 20 years of experience in practicing program management as well as training and consulting to his Government & Commercial clients in the United States and overseas in a variety of industries including; Information Technology, Electronics, Communications, Public Works, Transportation, Insurance and HealthCare, Bio-Technology and Pharmaceutical.

In 1992, Kanan founded Integrated Management Associates (IMA) a Global management services firm based in Natick, Ma. IMA's seminar leaders and professional consultants have worked with numerous customers in the United States, South America, and Europe focusing on helping companies optimize their project / product development processes through the effective use of a variety of structured organizational and management processes, tools and techniques. Kanan holds a BS degree in Engineering from the University of Wales U.K. and a Master of Science degree in Engineering from Northeastern University. He teaches and consults on project management through the Worcester Polytechnic Institute and UCONN Continuing Education Departments. He is a founding member of the Massachusetts chapter for the Microsoft project users group (MPUG). He is also a member of the Project Management Institute.